You know my pretty wondered all year why I never had you in any of my classes
maybe it was because you are so intelligent and then again maybe not. It was really a riot in this study hall with you poking me in the ribs and keeping me awake all the time. I hope you and Mary have a lot of fun
this summer and maybe Bill and Bob and I will see you out at the Reg - Best wishes

Hi Chris,
 Seeing you all the time kept my spirits up. Choir sure was alot of fun wasn't it. That was a real riot. I'll see ya around this summer.
 Good luck and God bless

Kris,
 Hey girl,
 you are a bad one.
 Just kidding. Always really great knowing you towards the end of the year.
 I hope we can go out and play
 again sometime.
 Love ya,

Kris,
 I don't know if I deserve to write in here but if anyone can, I certainly can. So we really had fun in Geography. Best of luck Kris. Have a lot of fun.

CHALLENGE OF CHANGE: Emphasis Shifted from Teach Us To Teach Us All

A PARTIAL EXPLANATION for the seemingly crowded library conditions stemmed from the fact that tables and chairs were removed to make room for the new study carrels. But it was also true that more students were compelled to use the facilities as curriculum changes placed greater emphasis on research projects.

Starting in the fall, the library's periodical shelves became stuffed with magazines describing an educational revolution. Use of the word revolution is intemperate.

The school's several history survey courses make it pointedly clear that: revolutions have a way of escaping their instigators, are aimed at the destruction of established systems and can only be judged at their conclusion by a "means and ends" test.

Except for the American Revolution, the history books do not treat revolutions charitably. So who wants an educational revolution?

If there is a "Challenge of Change to Education", then President Johnson's remarks in his "State of the Union Message" were more in the American tradition.

The President noted that the creation of new instruments of educational progress, "required trial and error and has produced both". And, he noted, that the time has come to evaluate every program. "Where there have been mistakes, we will try very hard to correct them. Where there has been progress, we will try very hard to build upon it".

Perhaps it is easier for a political figure than an educational figure to make such a statement. Seemingly the educator has yet to realize that education like democracy is a "... method of finding proximate solutions for insoluble problems".

If nationally the pet word is "revolution", then locally the pet adjective is "college" or the compound "college-level". One or the other is used to denote outstanding performances. If "college" as an adjective is the ultimate good that teenagers in high school are to aspire to, then why is there so much adult dissatisfaction with the behavior and values of college students?

However, the main source of discontent and mischief is the "bound" programs—the college-bound, the career-bound, the vocational-bound, etc. The programs operate contrary to one of the objectives of the Education Act of 1965. Separate but equal learning opportunities, whether determined by skin color or achievement test range, are inherently unequal.

Expressing a determinist outlook that surpasses even the Puritans, the "bounds" are selected by tests that can't measure endurance, ambition, motivation or creativity.

While adults may dispute the students' right to judge, the fact is that after three years seniors make judgments. Some feel they have been deprived of good teachers and opportunities to improve themselves. Others find it difficult to reconcile the fact that while in athletics the "late-bloomer" is given a chance, in the classroom the possibility that "late-bloomer" may exist is ignored, avoided or both.

His,
 Just think if it wouldn't have been for Vis I would have never met you (I almost made it). Really has been great knowing you this year I guess.

Good Luck

Early Results Underscored Need to Enlarge Program

The day after Graduation Day, 55 to 60 per cent of the proud diploma holders will flood the Oshkosh labor market. If tradition holds, most will soon discover a high school diploma does not assure a good job.

For some sixty members of the '67 class the school found an answer to the grim realities confronting high school graduates. Oshkosh participated in a pilot Vocational Education Training Program.

In this the first full year of operation, four occupational fields were opened to students for combined classroom instruction and on-the-job-training. As program co-ordinator, Mr. Marg.

supervised the efforts in the fields of radio-TV repair, food services, business and office occupations and retailing.

An evaluation team from the State Department of Education cited the Radio-TV offering as the first of its kind in the state. Commendation was also given the Food Service Program. The evaluation team reported the existence of only four of these in state high schools.

Student response to the program was enthusiastic from the outset. Here was an opportunity to earn, learn and get out of school 56 minutes earlier than 2200 of your classmates.

Money Helped to Shed Light On New, Old Learning Ideas

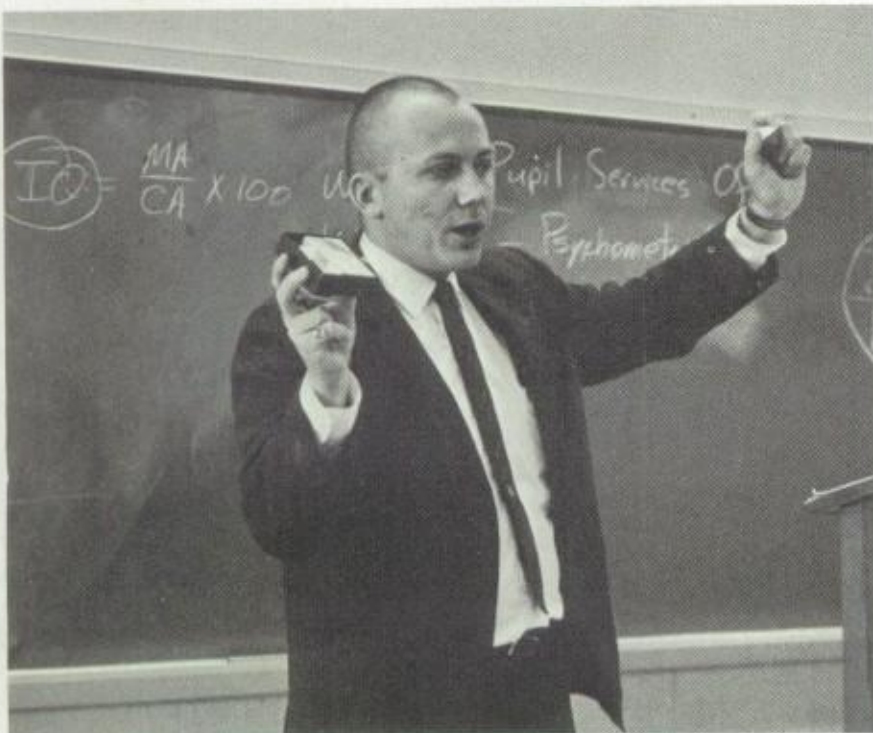

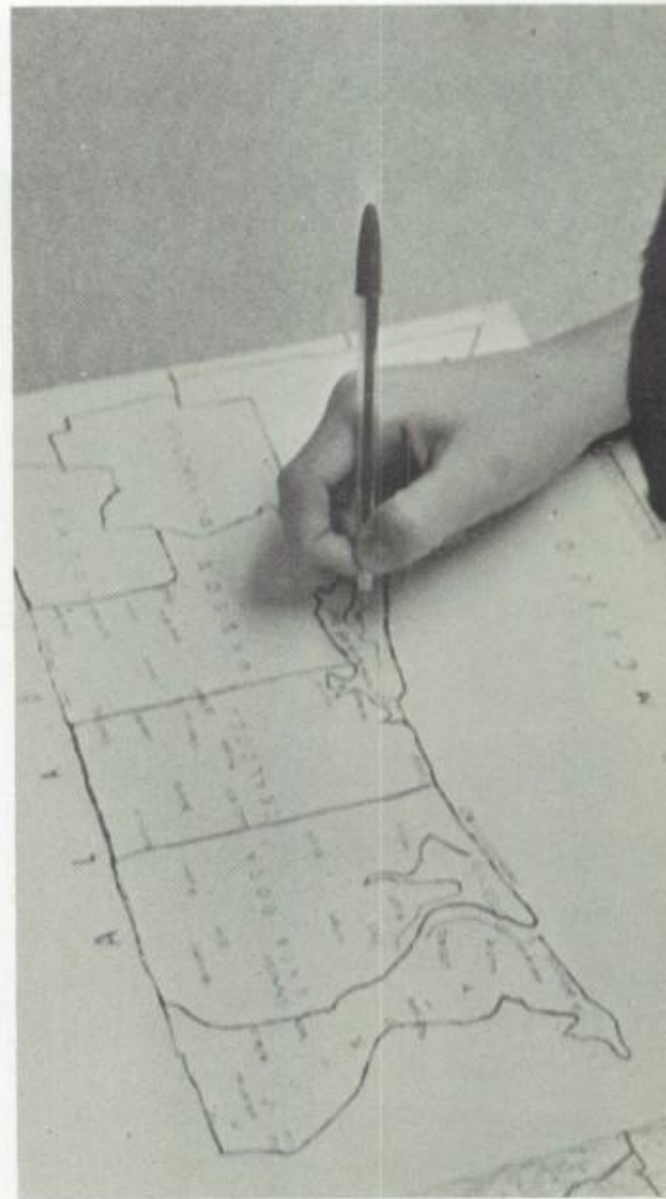

Languages and social studies presented a kaleidoscope of changes and additions whose pattern of intent was obvious only to the knowledgeable. Example: $90 worth of reference materials for each US History classroom. Example: teacher aides to supplement the teachers in the foreign languages. Example: two new classes for the English Department.

In addition to a new German III class, the Foreign Language Department gained much from its experiences with the Amity Teacher Exchange Program. Miss Marianne Meier worked with the French and German classes. Miss Gladys Copète worked almost exclusively with Spanish students in an effort to strengthen conversation skills.

Basically, Miss Copète worked to develop students' appreciation of Spanish as it is spoken in the Western Hemisphere.

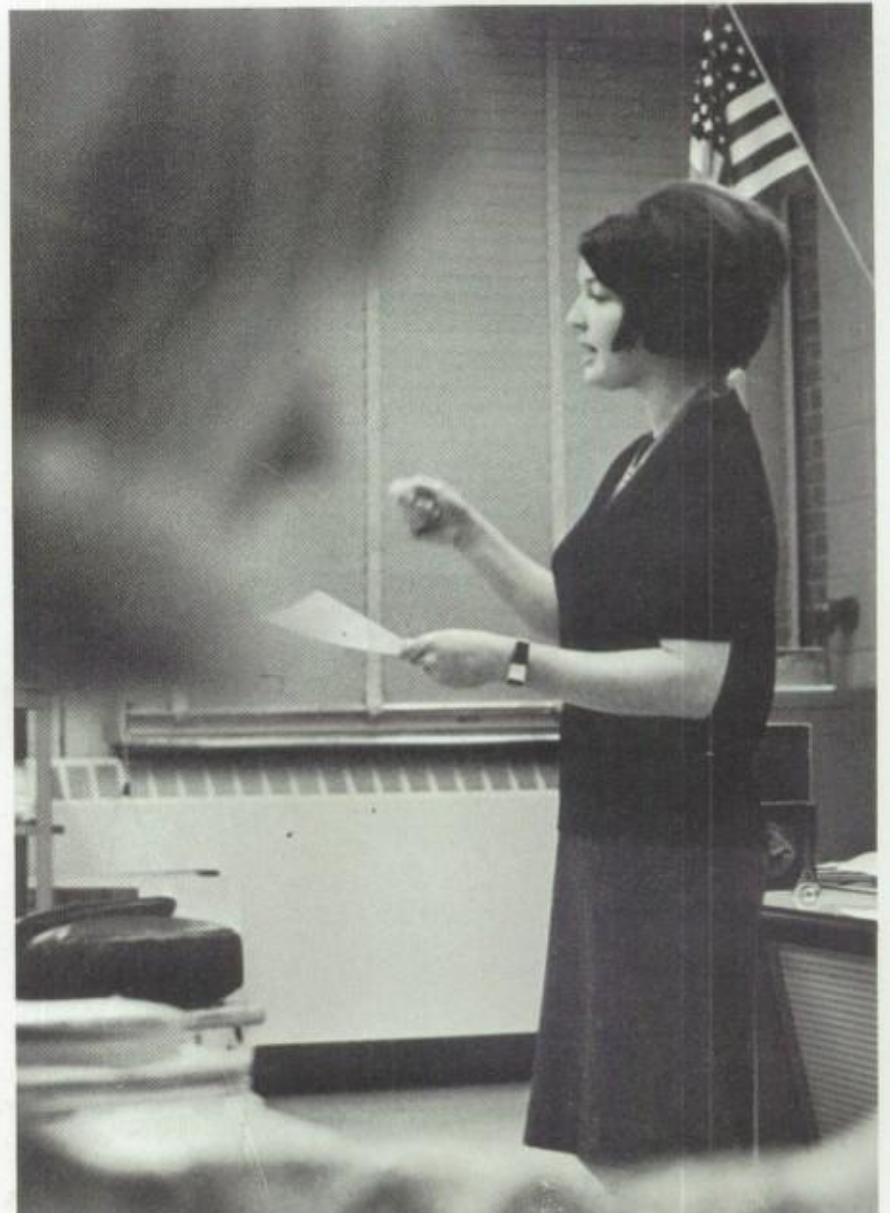

Basic English IV and Remedial Reading were added to the English curriculum. Recognizing the fact that students enrolled in the course would focus their reading efforts on magazines and newspapers, a special mass communications media study unit was developed for class use. The usual English class textbook was replaced by assigned readings in a variety of paperbacks.

The Remedial Reading program worked to eliminate flaws in the sophomores' reading skills. As individual progress permitted, students were encouraged to increase their basic reading speed.

Armed with compasses, protractors and rulers, mathematics students prepared themselves for a lot of figuring and a lot more erasing. Commercial Courses Lured 39 Percent of Enrollment

Electric typewriters hummed and jingled and mimeograph machines whirled and choked as commercial students prepared to make the business world turn. During the school year, 950 students learned to be efficient in the skills, proficient on the machines, and omniscient about the language, legal procedure and protocol necessary for business careers. One hundred eighty students returned for more of the same in summer school.

Would-be secretaries strove for word mastery, seeking to type 60 or take down 120 words in a minute, struggling to spell hundreds more in a semester for stenography. Some fooled with figures; bookkeepers and clerical record keepers scratched their practice books full of neat black columns of numbers.

Retailing classes created super-salesmen, who dabbled in budgets, investments, business law, advertising, labelling and quality control. They learned to tempt customers by attractively dressing the C-27 display window, while future office workers discussed how to be well dressed for an office day. Students in Business Machines classes prepared to be part of the world of automation, talking and listening to dictaphones, punching adding machines, and feeding fluid and paper into hungry duplicating machines.

◆ TO ACHIEVE PRECISION and accuracy in application of the touch method to the ten keyboard adding machine, Pat Nowicki used her hand to bracket workbook material while her eyes followed down the page.

♦ MR. POTTERTON REALIZED that this group of sophomores may never be candidates for the football team. However, he knew that their appreciation of the sport would be improved if the boys knew the fundamentals.

“Lively Ones” Found New Energy Outlets

In the good old days of ink-dipped pigtailed and willow switches, dummies were people who sat in corners wearing dunce caps. The only people who stayed after school were naughty boys.

This year, dummies were people who lay on the gym floor, swathed in bandages, while their junior classmates practiced first aid on them. After-schoolers sat, not only in the detention room, but in the driver's seat of shiny new cars loaned to the school district. The good old days were gone in the academic disciplines; Industrial Arts and Physical Education classes also reflected the atmosphere of the sixties.

Industrial Arts classes worked with leather, glass, gasoline engines and architectural design problems. Sophomores in Driver Education prepared for the immediate future, trading temps for permanent licences, eager to drive the '67 cars.

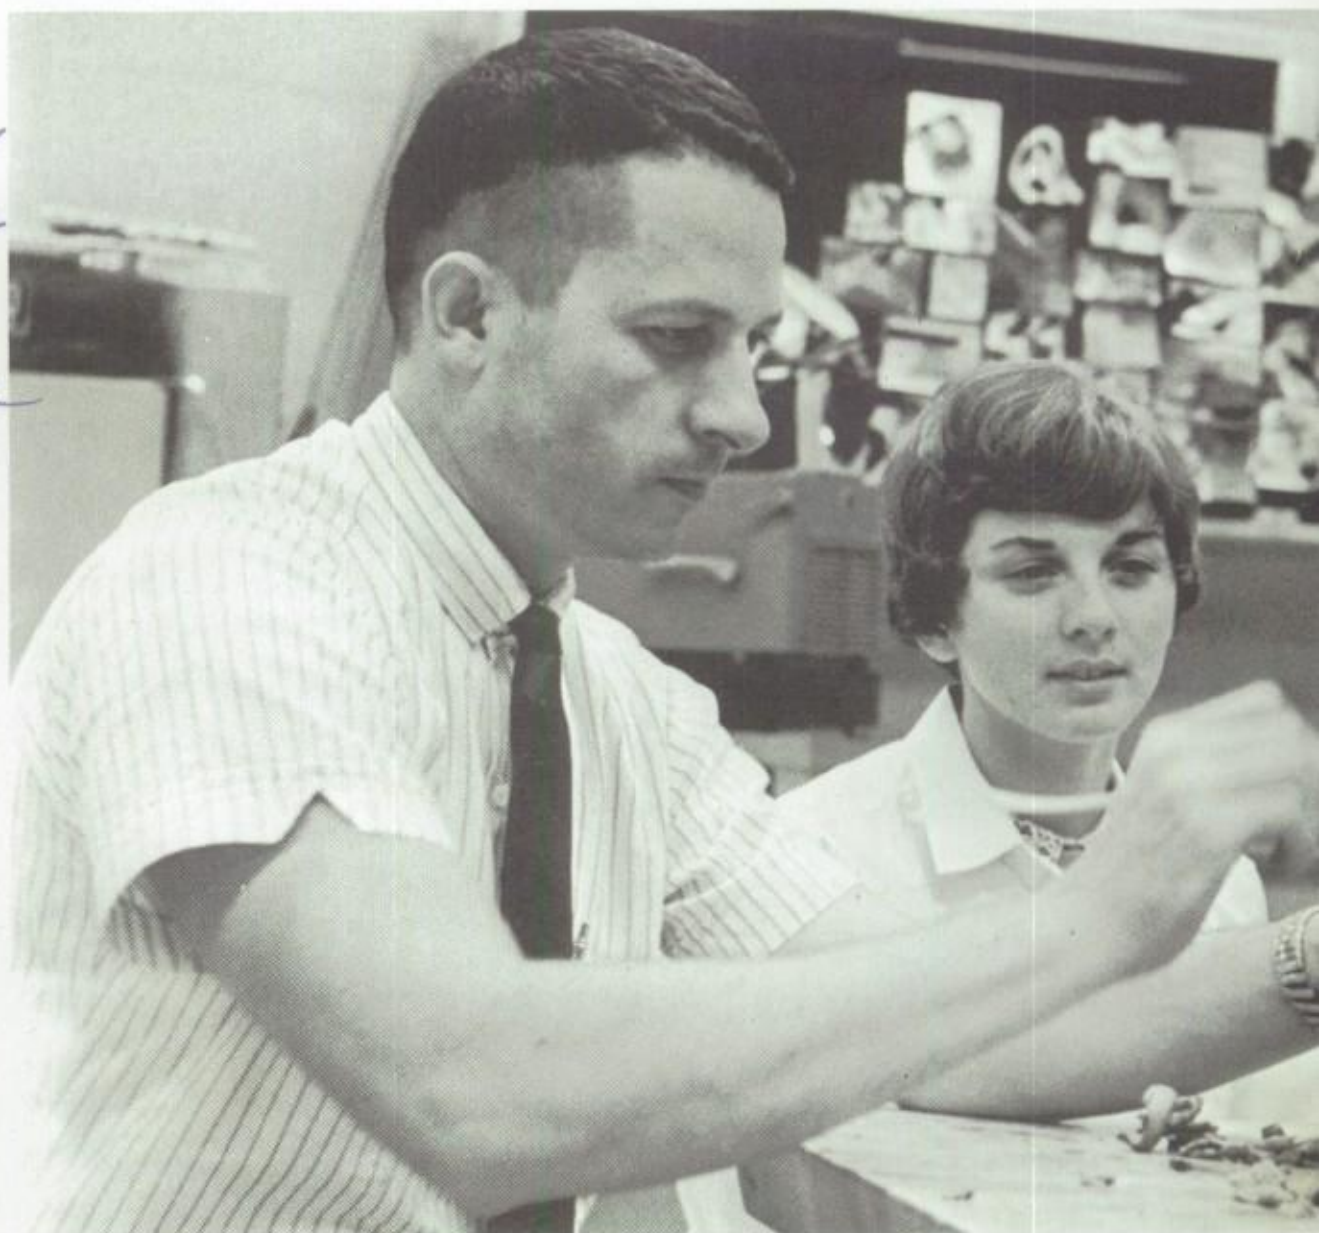

Modern farmers also prepared to drive new machines, test for soil acidity and plow the land according to the contours of the future.

Physical Education classes reflected Kennedy's influence. Students struggled to prepare for their physical fitness tests by exercising to music and scaling apparatus. Girls asked not what their figures could do for them but what they could do for their figures.

Homemaker Skills Fostered; Artists Struggled to Create

Whether the immediate product is a bracelet or a budget, a sketch or crepe suzette, a glazed pot or a raised doughnut, the final goal in art and home economics classes is the same: making masterpieces.

In Home Economics Survey, senior girls with marriage in mind, studied money management, child development and furniture selection, probably hoping to latch on to one of those model husbands the Boys Foods classes were producing. Their homes will be their castles; they also learned to be lords and masters of the sink, stove and grocery store. A new Home Economics course, Food Service, prepared career cooks, even giving them on the job training in restaurants.

While home economics students sketched the outlines of their futures, art students just sketched—and potted, and sculpted, and painted, and drew and made jewelry. Their masterpieces were on display in the spring show, Retrospect III and in the one man shows required of Art IV students. There were no masterpieces left to show from the Boys Foods classes. Would you believe they were good enough to eat?

Bandsmen's Vitality Accorded Recognition

Eight words from the lyrics of an old pop tune, "Anything you can do, I can do better", provided the most apt summary of the Instrumental Music Department and Mr. Croft.

In spirit, if not in an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation, there was competition between the vocalists and instrumentalists. Space measurements of newspaper articles proved this. Yet, the two cooperated. And Concert Band's instrumentalists will view the same European landscape as A Cappella's vocalists.

At Milwaukee and at Detroit, critics and hosts were as unstinting in their praise on Concert Band as they were of A Cappella.

However, in the world of friendly tension which existed between the two departments, each had an edge.

The instrumentalists provided more free entertainment. They are required to provide musical selections for home football games, basketball games and pep rallies. The vocalists had a clear edge in the promotional, fund raising activities—A Cappella's traditional Christmas record sales took care of that.

Individually, Mr. Croft might have edged out Mr. Leist. The School of Musician named Mr. Croft "one of the nation's 10 most outstanding band directors for the 1966-7 school year".

While the vocalists and instrumentalists put on an equal number of performances for audiences, the instrumentalists had an edge on the vocalists because they provided the musical accompaniment for three A Cappella appearances.

Affluence, Influence Produce European Trip

Copy writers for Hollywood extravaganzas would have had a field day doing publicity blurbs for A Cappella Choir. Look at the possibilities. "10 years in the planning". "Three years casting". "A year in production".

Look fantastic? By standards of a year or two ago, yes. But after this year who will be able to say what is fantastic or impossible for the Vocal Music Department.

A Cappella spent the year raising money and making preparations to complete a 17-day concert tour of Europe arranged by the Institute of European Studies of Vienna, Austria.

The estimated cost for each student was $500 apiece. By June 13, it may be lower as a result of income earned by the Choir through special fund raising concerts and revenue obtained through the sale of A Cappella's Christmas album.

To further lighten the financial burden on individuals, the choir's Winter Frolics Concert had as its theme "Twenty Years of Musicals". For their money, audiences received a generous dose of nostalgia as stars of operettas over the past twenty years reappeared again in title roles, singing songs that won them fame.

Club Followed Pattern; Had Unchanging Routine

The 96 members of the French Club decided to adhere to the same goals as in previous years. The group had been satisfied with their results in the past, and it resolved to try them again. The only change in routine was the addition of a new adviser, Miss Schmidt.

The group hosted their usual Christmas party with an unusual feature. A few members chose to entertain the others with a story. Each of the cast read a portion of the story, Le Soir Devant Bon Noel, better known as The Night Before Christmas.

One of its methods of raising money was to sell refreshments in the Snack Bar at one of the basketball games. Volunteers worked in half hour shifts to give the many club members who signed up a chance to work in the club's interest.

The group also received money from its Hootenanny. A folk singer taught the participants some songs in French. That way the members got to exercise their singing talent along with their French pronunciation ability.

During Language Week, the members wore paper replicas of the French flag and set up an exhibit of various French articles. During that week they also featured their annual French Banquet. As French Club closed up the year, the members enjoyed many French delicacies.

Latin Club Savored Dead Empire's Glories

A strange group of seventy who met monthly in Miss Fenzl's room were suspected of conducting un-American activities. While claiming to be a democratic organization, they called themselves a royal order and awarded their best student a crown. One night they wound themselves in sheets and lay glorifying Rome and gorging themselves. Most undemocratic was their treatment of sophomores; they sold them as slaves.

The group defied the school motto, a Latin phrase meaning "culture not show", by applying its cultural knowledge to build a pagan Homecoming Court display.

Only one activity marked the Latins as one hundred per cent American: fund raising. They worked diligently to render unto Romulus what was his.

The German people have long been known for having a good time, and the German Club followed in the tradition of their adopted language. Members attended the Holiday Folk Fair in Milwaukee where they observed exhibits depicting customs of various foreign lands.

During Language Week, the German Club had its "day". Members wore miniature reproductions of the flag of Germany, set up a window display showing various aspects of German culture and concluded the day with a German style banquet.

Created by student demand only one year ago, high interest has displayed itself in the activities and projects sponsored by Die Gemutliche Ordnung. The main purpose of the club was to further students' knowledge of the German language and culture through extracurricular activities.

Visitors Promoted Interest in Spanish Club

AMERICAN COOKIES AND PUNCH, set in a Spanish atmosphere, surrounded Equador's foreign exchange student Ceci Salazar and Columbia's Amity Teacher Aid, Miss Copète at the Christmas party.

With a Columbian exchange teacher aide, two Spanish speaking foreign exchange students and 48 club members for materials, Miss Patricia Durkin, the new Spanish teacher, proceeded to weave a colorful Spanish club. Intertwined in the club's year were skits, programs, dances and music from Spain and Latin America to help members expand their knowledge of the Hispanic culture.

Ceci Salazar, AFS exchange student from Equador, added color by demonstrating typical dances including the Bamba, Raspa and Cumbia. Navidad, a Spanish Christmas, was celebrated by breaking pinatas and singing Spanish carols.

Spring Language Week and a fiesta provided a finish to the weaving with small paper reproductions of the Spanish flag, Spanish food and entertainment.

Ian Fleming's Hand Detected Picking "Brains" for O'Neil

Double-O-Seven was a magic number during the school year. In Ian Fleming's famed fictional Secret Service, it indicated a license to kill. In a bottle, its scent promised to kill ladies on the spot.

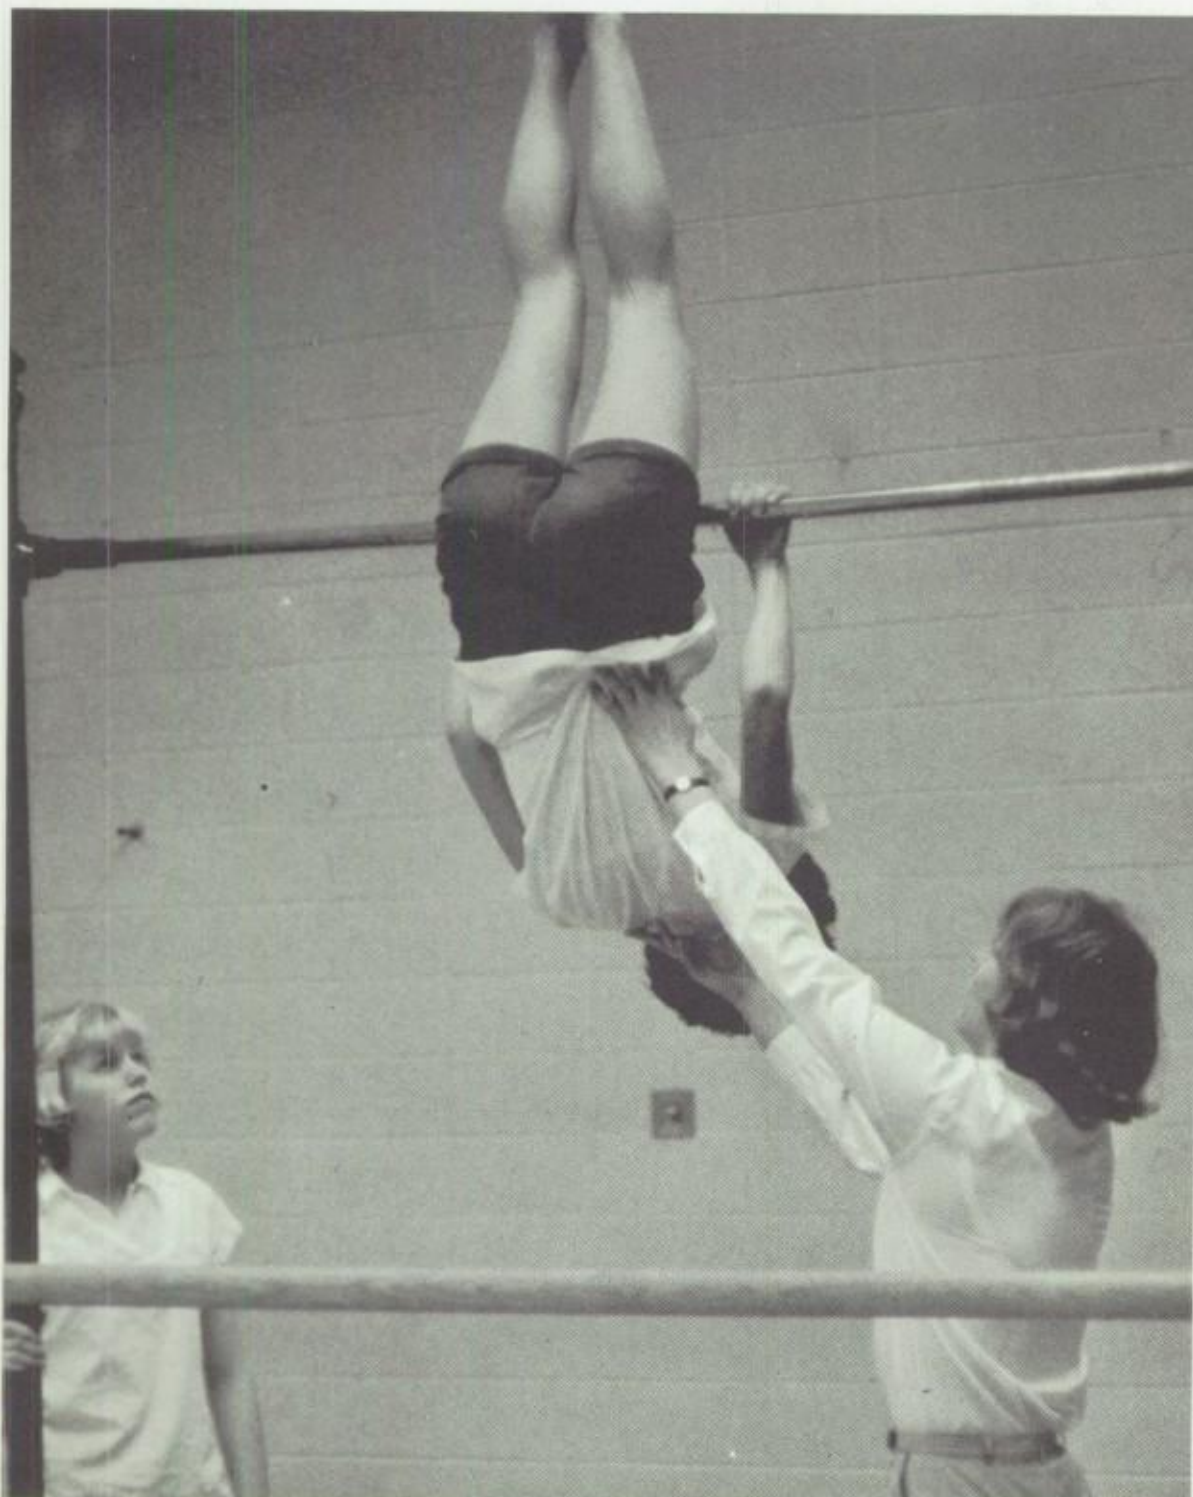

In school, it indicated only a little gold pin worn by a select group of O'Neil National Honor Society members. Why 007? So tough were the requirements that only .007 per cent of the senior class qualified for O'Neil Honor Society membership in the junior year.

To earn the pin, the ten members slaved with the super-human energy of Bond and none of his super-special gadgetry to put time and talent into extra-curricular activities. Then they slaved some more to score high on the honor roll.

After that, the rest was easy. O'Neil members met only for elections: chapter officers and class elections. Shortly after the polls closed, the number lost its magic. The ranks of the intellectually elite increased as juniors and additional seniors won favorable consideration.

Kris,

El bet you'll never forget our English class this year. We had a lot of fun in there. Good luck at school next year and when you get out.

Always a friend,
Marileyn Giffey

GAA Enlarged Its Program Helped Girls Trim Figures

"Sugar and spice, and everything nice, that's what little girls are made of". Trampoline stunts and baseball bunts, basketballs and coordinated falls, that's what GAA girls are made of.

At least that's what three club advisers tried to instill in 60 club members. Miss Smith assumed leadership of basketballs and coordinated falls, while bowling and skiing were taken over by Miss Siebert. New to the program was a gymnastic group organized by Miss Chapman.

The semi-annual collection of dues helped purchase awards which were distributed at the annual picnic. Letters, chevrons, and bowling trophies were awarded on a basis of over-all participation.

Sugar and spice may be good qualities for home economics students, but Bonnie Pruden warns that girls need more.

Blue and white booster buttons covered enthusiasts. Blue and white signs were plastered on the corridor walls. Blue and white pennants were gloriously waved by students. Black and blue bruises covered the knees of poster painting Pep Club members.

Hours of work, jars of tempera paint, and rolls of brown paper went into the various victory signs urging "Defeatism and Ignorthing".

Club members sold booster buttons and pennants to throngs of boisterous students. Colorful skits presented during the pep rallies were organized through the club, and members rounded up different talents from students.

Snappy and precise routines were presented by the Pom-Pon squad as half-time entertainment at home basketball games.

Assisted by two advisers, Miss Barbara Habstritt and Mrs. Joan Hudson, the club undertook other school activities. Members supervised Parents Night at Homecoming. Pep Clubbers gave up their lunch hours to sell bus tickets for away games. Also under the responsibilities of Pep Club were providing coat-checking services, organizing the refreshment stand at basketball games and serving at athletic banquets.

Members had paint, pennants and pep.

Congenial Atmosphere Aided Release of Creative Talent

Furniture shifted. Eyes focused on the lone stool in B-11. Feet tapped—hands clapped. The lively guitar rhythm coaxed vocal cords.

Art club members enjoyed an authentic hootenanny led by Mrs. Ewing, a professional folk singer. Members sat cross-legged on the barren floor while Mrs. Ewing, perched on a stool in the center of the room, directed and accompanied the group in a song-fest. After about two hours of singing, members refreshed themselves with large quantities of Pepsi.

Members attended regular bi-monthly meetings to plan future activities and conduct business matters associated with the organization. Films and speakers selected by the officers brightened the meetings.

"Sketch sessions" provided an opportunity for members to sketch student models as they posed on tables. The sessions encouraged student artists to apply classroom theories about angle perspective and subject viewpoint to actual drawings.

To further whet artistic appetites, the club paid a $40 rental fee to view the life story of Vincent Van Gogh as depicted in the three-hour color movie "Lust for Life". Members were admitted to the Little Theater free while interested non-members paid a 10-cent admission charge.

Field Trip, Emergencies Highlighted Year

VOLUNTEEN OFFICERS, reading from bottom to top: Vice President Debbie Hansen, President Beth Morris, Secretary Mary Jo Hogan.

Emergency! Take this to X-ray, please. This patient belongs in Room 334!

To the members of the Volunteens organization, these brief commands were heard quite often and obeyed without hesitation. But to FNA members these were commands of the future, only to be heard if they decided upon entering the nursing profession.

One of the purposes of FNA was to familiarize students with various sections of the medical field. A field trip was taken to Milwaukee. It permitted students to visit hospitals and schools of nursing. Speakers addressed interested students on the pros and cons of many distinct professions concerned with medicine.

Many members volunteered their services in the Health Room and assisted the school nurse, Mrs. Rudolph, with eye and ear tests. They also assisted with the TB skin testing program by rubbing alcohol on quivering arms.

Dues were used for a faculty tea, and at Christmas, money or food was given to a needy family.

To Volunteens, hectic commands were quite common, since its members volunteered their services to the hospital. The girls, sixteen years or older, were permitted to work at Mercy's front desk. The girls are required to take emergencies up to the emergency room. They also gave directions to visitors and delivered mail and flowers to patients.

Members were also permitted to work at any of the nursing homes. Responsibilities here were mainly social—talk with the retired patients.

Club's Synonym for Service Was Work

"Work conquers all". This phrase well described the captivating force of Key Club—"work".

Soon after school started, the members made plans for the annual Teacher's Coffee Hour in November.

December came, and the club's Christmas spirit and good will was expressed by gifts of yule logs for hospitals and nursing homes and food baskets given to the Salvation Army.

When semester change was over, time was found to host the Nicolet High School All Boys Usher's Club.

As the end of the year crept up on slippered feet, the Key Club gave a spring dance to raise money for two school scholarships.

As "time marches on", future Key Clubs may be conquered by work. But don't try to tell the club members that all they did this year was "work".

Lack of Projects Relegated Pythagorean to Obscurity

PYTHAGOREAN COUNCIL OFFICERS,

The only requirement for membership in the Pythagorean Council other than to pay dues was to have an interest in science and mathematics. Those who were considering entering future vocation in these fields joined the council where they were exposed to the subjects of their interest.

It was the responsibility of the council to see that the Ruth Lobdell Memorial Award was presented to the outstanding geometry student of the year. The club also sponsored the first and second year algebra contest. A monetary award was presented to the winner in each case. In addition, Pythagorean Council paid the entry fee of participants in the annual Mathematical Association of America contest.

In order to make meetings interesting and to provide a challenge for eager minds, members were given mathematical puzzles and logic problems to solve. A guest lecturer, Professor Evans from the WSU-Oshkosh Department of Astronomy, spoke to students at one of the regular meetings.

Extra funds were raised by operating the Snack Bar during a basketball game. The money earned would defray some of the expenses of a proposed Chicago trip where the members planned to visit the Museum of Science and Industry. Of more practical value was the conducted tour of the computer center maintained at WSU-Oshkosh.

Minutes Bulged with Record of Sociability

The familiar quote, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy", may be interpreted as, "All business and no pleasure makes FBLA a dull club".

To make sure things never became dull, members undertook projects which could scarcely be categorized as strictly business. They gave toys to needy children, went on a field trip and sold candy at $1.00 a can.

Members then mixed business with pleasure at the annual FBLA Convention held in meeting facilities owned by the Green Lake Baptist Assembly. The state-wide convention was open to all FBLA groups in Wisconsin. After an election of state officers, members hashed over the activities and ideas of local clubs in an effort to pick up new ideas.

However, they managed to inject a little business on the side in the form of a Johnson Hills Day. FBLA members were given an opportunity to participate in both clerical and sales work for one day. This helped them gain invaluable on-the-job experience.

In this day and age, FBLA represents future business leaders of America, but a peek into the future may reveal FB & PLA—"P" as in pleasure.

Today's farmer has problems. No one eats to eat his surplus foods; everyone eats up his profits. The only way a small farmer can survive is to become a big farmer.

FFA groups worked to make new farmers bigger and better than ever. The boys traveled around the state practicing showing, growing, leading, judging and speaking. The practice paid off. Robert E. Lee, Gale Tigert, Dennis Jones and Howard Derber won awards from the Wisconsin Farmer, Green Giant, Consolidated Badger and Hoard's Dairyman.

It looked like the best middle man a young farmer could meet was his agriculture teacher, the man who picks up and delivers his future.

Profession's Shade Raised, FTA Peeked at Realities

Students start school with a number of misconceptions. The first and most quickly cleared up is that the teacher knows everything. The second, sometimes never clarified, is that teaching is easy.

FTA members tried to clear up these misconceptions by determining what makes a good teacher. Tutoring, visiting, drinking tea and selling toothbrushes revealed some of the tricks of the trade.

Tutoring struggling fellow students in conference rooms and carrels brought the insight that teachers struggle too. Half-day visits to elementary or junior high schools helped FTA members learn teaching procedures as they observed from the sidelines.

The annual tea gave members and teachers an opportunity to meet and talk together informally, exchanging opinions, information and ideas.

What makes a good teacher? All the right answers, all the right questions, the most experience, the newest insight, the sharpest red pencil or the biggest bag of tricks. Who cares? FTA members care.

SLSC Speculated on New Books' Origins

IN ORDER TO MOUNT the card pocket neatly in a new book, Rosemary Strey removed excess glue from her brush.

Charging out books, putting away books, rearranging books and preparing new books for the shelves were repetitious but essential services performed by Student Library Service Club members.

A combination book fair and teachers' tea, held this year during National Library Week, was the club's main project. SLSC members used imagination and artistic ability to set up attractive booths in the library, choosing themes for their displays from titles of the best known "Broadway plays". During the tea, teachers inspected the booths and voted for the ones they thought were best.

SLSC conducted both a late autumn and a late spring book fair during the year. The autumn book fair netted $20 profit. The two fairs took the place of selling paperback books before and after school in the text book library.

Paying dues was a minor requirement for the club's members. Putting in an hour of library work a day and maintaining passing grades were the more demanding ones.

Not in the line of duty but more as an obligation to the school community, was the tradition of decorating the Christmas tree in the library. After the trimming was done, club members celebrated Christmas with a pizza party.

BOWLING FOR an MIAA team on the Shoreview Lanes, Ted Donker displayed classic form.

Competition Was The Lure Program Siphoned Energy

When it came to a documented study of interest and participation, Men's Intramural Athletic Association ranked first.

Started 16 years ago, MIAA offered continuing proof that boys like competition. The past three years has witnessed a definite upswing in participation as physical education classes emphasized physical skills, conditioning and sports appreciation. One hundred thirty boys participated in the basketball tournament and 60 more joined the bowling league.

Sophomores displayed the greatest class interest in basketball. Fifty boys formed four teams to play against one another in a double round-robin tournament on either Monday or Wednesday. Eighty junior and senior boys formed eight teams.

But it was the upper classmen's all-star team that had the honor of playing against the faculty in the annual February benefit game. A sophomore all-star team played the preliminary game against the first round winner in the upper-classmen's tournament.

The bowling league offered the added inducement of tournament competition on the regional and state level.

Would you believe a club without an adviser? How about a club with its membership dues paid which did not hold a meeting until December?

If Sock & Buskin seemed to exist in a twilight world, it was following the actors' path of the 19th century. If it seemed to be spoofing, then it was following the general entertainment trend of the year.

Eventually, Sock & Buskin's 135 members discovered orthodoxy and the 20th century.

With the appointment of Mrs. James Alderson as adviser, Sock & Buskin announced that its play—postponed from October—would be given in March. In recognition of last year's activities, a local chapter of Thespians sprouted and eight members were formally initiated.

"O" Men's Competitive Zest Brought Benefits to Others

Once there was a boy who wanted to join a certain club. His eyes glowed when he heard about the club's activities and contributions.

One day he heard that the club contributed $50 to help purchase new outfits for the cheerleaders. To help pay for this, the club held a dance and sold refreshments at the Snack Bar during basketball games.

The boy also discovered that the club made crepe paper mums for Homecoming and contributed a permanent record board of the school's record holders in track events.

At Christmas time, the boy learned that the organization was helping a needy family by purchasing groceries and toys.

As for a happy ending, the boy discovered that when he earned a varsity letter, he too could become a part of the Lettermen's Club activities.

THE TEMPTATION was irresistible. John Dahl evoked a hearty laugh from Dick Friedrich as John mimicked extreme women's hat fashions by using paper mums.

Leprechauns Rifled Wallets As Finian Tantalized Public

Webster's Third International doesn't say so in as many words, but Oshkosh is operetta; which is Music Department; which is people; which is box office and that is money.

A Cappella's presentation of "Finian's Rainbow" reinforced this definition.

The size of this year's production must have brought tear-mist to the eyes of the real Irish. Dancers, cast and chorus numbered 129 students. Exclusive of the Music Department's own staff, the three night staging of the twentieth consecutive operetta also used the professional help of eight other adults.

Yet despite the popularity of its tunes and the lavish sets and lighting, "Finian's Rainbow" left audiences slightly uneasy. Lane and Harburg's 1947 musical comedy retained its satirical approach to race relations and Irish stereotypes in 1966.

Since none of the little green men could be found when there was work to be done, 30 students assumed partial responsibility for behind the scenes details. Those Leprechauns were probably out hoarding their hidden gold.

But Irish luck was with "Finian's Rainbow". It made a pot of green—money that is.

◆ WITH A SMILE on her face, dancer Carol Delk leaned forward to receive the finishing brush strokes preparatory to joining the chorus on stage.

◆ SHOCK, BEWILDERMENT, AND DISMAY were registered by the sharecroppers as Buzz Collins (Paul Muetzel) announced that their land was being repossessed.

◆ WHILE THE GOSPELERS (Ray LaPoint, Steve Case and Mitch Robertson) sang "The Begat", a contrite Senator Billboard Hawkins (Dean Rudoy) listened humbly.

Drip-splash. Drip-splash. Rain beat down upon painted cars in the student parking lot, causing the paint to run and making slogans and lettering illegible. But spirits were not at all dampened as Queen Kay King reigned over the Homecoming '66 festivities.

Students bedecked with mums surged into the gym for the seventh hour pep rally. The cheerleaders roused spirit with new cheers they originated this year. The new faculty members presented a skit depicting the "new generation" of teachers.

City Manager Angus Crawford was the guest speaker. It was his first appearance before a high school audience since being appointed to the post less than a year ago.

Students purchased blue and white crepe paper mums from the Lettermen before first hour. Senior girls wore the traditional white and blue ribboned mums.

In spite of the wind and rain that continued throughout the day, the Homecoming parade attracted spectators. The winning float, "We'll Fry 'Em", depicted a huge Indian ready to toss the Sheboygan South "bratwurst" into a paper skillet.

Perhaps the gusts of wind that blew across the field cast a hex upon the Indians. Despite universal predictions for a victory over the Redmen, the game ended in 7-7 tie.

Later, under a huge, glowing, harvest pumpkin, students danced snug and dry to the music of "The Ricochettes", and Homecoming '66 was at an end.

◆ ATTIRED IN out-of-date fashions and clutching a copy of the daily notices, Mrs. Wesenberg and Miss Lindsay lampooned the faculty's habits and attitudes.

◆ ON A SOPHOMORE FLOAT parked in the Ceape Street marshalling area, Barbara Benedict hastily stuffed paper napkins into chicken mesh in an effort to repair wind damage.

AS HE PICKED photo-type characters for headlines from the type box, Mike Yurk was careful to hold the separate pieces of paper by the edges to avoid leaving smudge marks which would also be photographed along with the letter's shape.

Index Burned Lights Late; Workers Overflowed Office

The midnight oils burned . . . and burned and burned and burned. Heads throbbed and eyelids dropped. Index staff members set a new late hours record for their staff by staying after school until twelve o'clock to meet a deadline.

To stimulate its subscription drive, Index offered a free year's subscription to the first homeroom with 100 per cent sales. To the delight of Mr. Dalton's W-30 homeroom, they won and were refunded all their subscription payments. Over-all, 750 students purchased the paper this year.

The Schoenwetter dynasty of Index staff ended this year. However, the renaissance of a new dynasty could be in the making. Five more Gruenwalds could keep the paper well supplied with editors.

Jane Schoenwetter and Mary Gruenwald were co-editors this year. With Mr. Biendarra's help, the two directed the production efforts of 44 editorial staff members while Mr. Easterson handled the 12 student advertising salesmen. The total of 58 staff members was the largest in the paper's history.

For the fifth consecutive year NSPA awarded Index a First Class honor rating. Also, the Wisconsin Journalism Teacher-Adviser Workshop session rated the paper the second best high school newspaper published in the state. Both critical evaluations were based on study of the 1966 spring editions.

Council Became Democratic; Extended Financial Benefits

Student Council is people. Like people it is subject to praise or blame according to its actions. In school organizational climate marked by a scarcity of activity and a surplus of proposals, this year's council took action.

Council's critics and advocates seemingly had myopia. The former saw failure to do the "right" things. The latter saw cultural benefits.

In action started last year and finished this year, Delegate Assembly was eliminated. Student Council membership increased from 53 to 93 with representation from all homerooms.

Spurred by prizes for volume results, its members sold enough boxes of Turtles to net the organization $836. The proceeds were donated to the AFS program.

From its before and after school management of the Snack Bar, Student Council earned enough money to operate its own welfare program. It was the first teenage or adult organization in the city to pledge $1,000 to the proposed musicians' European tour. Another $1,000 was contributed to project HOPE.

The image of students' interest in interscholastic athletics had a new dimension this year. Shortly after basketball season started, the Council undertook to pay half of the transportation cost of buses to away games.

Excluding the Prom, all eight dances held in the building during the year were financed and supervised through the Student Council.

"Peanuts" Would Understand Notebook's Distinctive Lingo

Security is being first in line. Happiness is a warm puppy. Love is a letter on pink stationery. These definitions may apply to Charlie Brown and his loyal followers, but the Notebook staff had its own lexicon.

Copy writers defined happiness as a short word count, a completed questionnaire, a chat-ty club adviser, a late deadline. But most important, happiness was a completely satisfied editor.

However, the layout staff defined happiness as the "good ruler", a pen with ink in it, a big, black layout book filled with model "dummy sheets".

To the typing staff, love was sharing erasers and carbon paper, letting a friend use the last electric typewriter instead of the manual, turning in a typed copy without any erasures.

Security, to the research staff, was sharp pointed blue pencils in abundance, a sheet of verified names; a good supply of newspaper clippings, a brown book with irreplaceable information.

Sorrow was one word the "Peanuts" characters left undefined. But Notebook staff members found an endless supply of definitions for it. Sorrow was trimming 747 sophomore pictures during Christmas vacation, taking pictures during the day and again at night only to learn that verticals not horizontals were needed, acid indigestion after gulping goodies during seventh hour birthday celebrations.

All things combined; all pages mailed—sorrow, happiness, security, love—Notebook was defined in one word—satisfaction.

Musicians Served Audiences Audio-Visual Smörgasbord

From printed programs to musical selections, Opus 12 rode the bandwagon popularity of Op Art. Two distinct mediums of entertainment were presented simultaneously to the audience.

During the programs, slides were flashed on the auditorium's opposite walls. Selected from the Art Department's permanent collection, the slides were chosen to complement musical selections.

One of the band's feature numbers was written by Concert Band President Paul Smith. Originally, "Latin Holiday" was written and scored as a creative composition exercise. Mr. Croft felt the theme had a greater potential, so he re-scored it for Concert Band.

An 18 piece flute choir demonstrated real "stereo" music. For the "Yesterday" number, they moved to pre-selected spots in the auditorium aisles to play the arrangement.

To keep local jazz buffs happy, a Dixieland combo revived three traditional pieces and played them with a muted "rock" beat.

Two weeks before the scheduled performances, band members peddled tickets house-to-house. Mr. Croft estimated that the door-to-door salesmen canvassed about three-quarters of the city's residential area and sold close to 700 tickets. The extra sales effort was prompted by the necessity to raise funds for the Detroit trip.

Indians Plucked Featherless by Opponents

In the typical western novel or TV production, the indians perpetually ambush the settlers or cowboys. Not so for the 1966 football team. Conference opponents ambushed the Indians and the team was lucky to escape with any feathers left on its painted war bonnets.

In retrospect, the turning point of the season came at Sheboygan North. After fumbling five times in the first half and once in the third quarter, the team lost its momentum. A victory at that point of the season, Coach Schumerth believed, would have produced a season record of 6 wins and 2 losses instead of 3 wins, 4 losses and 1 tie.

But, sophomore braves held promise of better ambushes to come.

The Conference doesn't keep punting statistics, but unofficial team records indicated that sophomore Steve Koch averaged 37.5 yards a kick.

During the winter months, the coaching staff got out the movie projector and ran film clips of Fred Auclair. The reruns of the 6'4", 230-pound sophomore lineman in lateral pursuit of ball carriers warmed the blood.

♦ EMPLOYING THE GESTURE of a baseball umpire signalling that a runner is safe, Coach Erickson's gesture was intended to tell the players to slow down play.

♦ IN HEIGHT as well as in rebounding and scoring, center Jon Weber was the biggest Indian. He scored 309 points over the 16 game conference schedule to rank fourth in conference statistics.

Winning Efforts Developed Booming Bedlam Atmosphere

A few people recognized the game for what it was. A few more hoped it might be. No one before 8:15 p.m. on the night of December 2, figured it would be. The Indians played and won, in overtime, the sand-clock game against Sheboygan North.

While fashioning the 57-56 win, the team discovered a style of play that became its hallmark for the season. For lack of a more apt phrase it could be called an adrenalin-draining happening.

Instead of finishing in a predicted sixth place in the FRVC, Coach Erickson developed a team that finished third. In the process, the squad compiled its best victory record since the gym first reverberated to basketball yells six years ago.

It became a fashionable necessity for students to sit in the student section. Adults scrambled to buy tickets for the south side. Although it didn't win the title, for a week the team was in a three-way tie for first.

♦ FOR THE MOMENT Al Janke's pressing defense backfired. Al was caught with both feet off the floor and leaning the wrong way. This allowed his opponent to drive around him.

JV's Reversals Underscored Basic Flaws

If the young braves were again conference scapegoats it was not without good reason. Except for wrestling, all squads fell below the .500 mark. But it could have been different.

Consider football. The varsity, short on talent, raided the sophomore ranks. Three of 12 sophomores elevated to varsity were effective starters. Coach Prielipp was the first to admit that his remaining gridders suffered from more than the usual effects of inexperience.

Basketball repeated the football story except for the number of players involved. But, as Coach Potterton commented, "The JV's never seemed to jell as a unit." This was a polite way of saying that the team also lacked floor leadership.

JV Wrestling benefited from the general spurt in interest for all wrestling. At the beginning of the season there really wasn't a JV squad. But as more boys discovered that here was a sport which did not place a premium on weight or height, participation grew. Here a varsity talent surplus was passed down.

Team Chased Statisticians to Record Books

It was a Monday morning unlike any other. Golf coach Don Erickson stood at the flag pole helping to hoist the victory pennant. His team had won the conference meet and title. And a sophomore, Mike Guest, had led the way.

Memories and record books were searched. When had the school won its last golf title? The "human memory" of school history recorded the year 1952. There were no written records to consult.

Now there are.

As underclassmen continued to dominate play, the Indians finished second in a field of 14 teams competing in the WIAA Ripon Sectional Meet.

At the state meet, for the first time in anyone's memory, the Indians finished fifth in the 36-hole tournament. And for the first time in anyone's memory, an Oshkosh golfer finished in a tie for state medalist honors. He lost in a sudden death play-off. It was Guest.

Year's Experience Helped Improve Team Performance

Now in its second year as a varsity sport, wrestling started to attract spectators this season. But audiences weened on the theatrical cousin, TV professional wrestling, found the high school variety a little tame. The spectacular jumps, kicks, stomps and hair-pulling were missing. Present instead were six continuous minutes of muscular effort which emphasized individual conditioning and agility.

Coach Gibbs opened 1966-7 practice with six returning lettermen from a previous year's squad that had only won one of its meets. The team finished the season with a 6-3 record in dual meets; placed Dave Moon, Dave Patzlaff and Joe LeRoy as entrants in the Sectional Meet; and had one entrant, Dave Moon, in the State Meet.

Unfortunately, Moon, who over two years of competition had compiled the squad's most impressive winning record, was eliminated in the opening round of the 24th Annual State Meet.

◆ LOCKED TOGETHER in the classic Greco-Roman standing position, the unidentifiable Indian on the left matched muscle and coordination with his opponent in an effort to score a take-down.

◆ UNDER THE REFEREE'S close scrutiny, John Klink immobilized his opponent with a pinning hold.

♦ HAVING ALREADY LOST a point by getting into this unenviable position, the unidentified Indian on the bottom now worked to extricate himself by a side-roll and score a reversal point.

Tennis Team Haunted By Past Glories

Circumstances forced Coach Tom Miller to summarize the 1966 season as a good one. "But", he concluded, "it had its disappointments".

The Tennis Team was good enough to win five of eight dual meets. It scored shutout wins over four schools. It placed third in both the Conference and Sectional meets.

Actually, a combination of the team's winning record and the unavoidable comparison with other sports forced the circumstantial apology.

Over the past decade, the Tennis Team has been the power in the Fox Valley. Singles players and doubles combinations have been rated within the top three in the state. The '66 squad lacked stars of either kind.

Second, all other spring athletic teams captured one or more championship trophies for the school. Only the Tennis Team didn't add to the number of its trophies on view in the Athletic Department's display case.

Ramping Indians Shot Down by Rockets

Should the nation's military preparedness program ever need rockets, a Major in the Reserve Officer Corps knows where there are plenty—up at Neenah.

Having won its second consecutive FRVC Baseball crown with nine wins and three losses, Oshkosh was slightly favored to score a repeat victory over Neenah in the WIAA Sectional Tournament. But the Rockets shot the Indians down 8 to 3 and went to the State Tournament.

Before the season started, Coach Quandt was looking for pitchers and he found them. However, the same fate that overtook the Dodgers in the series against Baltimore befell the Indians. The team had unrevealed flaws.

Infielders, who as juniors had been likened to vacuum cleaners, suddenly became disconnected. In five conference games and tournament play, starting pitchers were forced off the mound by fielding miscues.

While Jim Schroeder's .393 batting average marked him as one of the conference's leading hitters, the aggregate team's batting average was closer to the .200 mark. Weak hitting was the final flaw. The team could not capitalize on free passes to the base paths given up by opponents.

Cindermen Waited 31 Years To Collect Second Trophy

Back in 1935 pole vaulters used a long bamboo shaft. Flood lights for night-time athletic contests were just coming into use. In 1935 Oshkosh won its first conference track championship.

In 1966 the school took its second FRVC Track championship by dramatically winning three of the final four events on the floodlit athletic field at Green Bay East. The spectacular victory was made possible by Bill Oaks. His double victory in the pole vault and high jump paced the balanced effort.

Oaks' specialty was riding the fiberglass pole up to rare air.

Throughout the season he was undefeated. Bill established a new conference outdoor record of 14'-4" and a new WIAA state meet record of 14'-2 1/2".

Since re-introduced as an interscholastic sport four years ago, Cross Country languished. The grand total of varsity dual meet victories was two.

But, winning can be contagious. With Craig Preston leading the way out of the burning embers of the Mt. Oshkosh practice course, this year the harriers won seven consecutive dual meets and placed third in the FRVC Conference Meet.

◆ COMING INTO THE FIRST turn of the 220 yard low hurdles, Jim Hoffman had an early lead over his opponent.

◆ DIMINUTIVE 5'6" BILL OAKS seemed to shrivel as he went higher because the whip-like action of the pole forced him to coil his body to avoid touching the bar.

◆ AT THE SECTIONAL MEET, Dave Patzlaff held his breath and puffed his cheeks just before putting the shot.

MR. PERRY A. TIPLER, who retires this year as Superintendent of the Oshkosh Area Public Schools, leaves behind him a totally different kind of school district than he inherited.

◆ 1966-7 MEMBERS of the Board of Education, Oshkosh Area Public Schools, sitting: Mrs. Betty Ekvall, President Dr. Q. C. Metzger. STANDING: Mr. Stephen Hitchcock, Mr. John Lenahan, Mr. Milton Seefeld, Mr. William Boller, Mr. Robert Hoffmann.

◆ THIS YEAR how could anyone introduce a new teacher named Mrs. Virginia Wolff without causing laughs? Mr. Tipler tried. However, once the laughter of the teacher audience reached its crescendo, even the superintendent broke up.

Verdict on A Superintendent: System Found Its Builder

In the Middle Ages craftsmanship was stratified into rigid and precise levels of ability. First there were apprentices to do the manual labor such as gathering bricks and mixing mortar so that journeymen could build the walls, shingle the roof and place the windows. Then, the master craftsman would add the ornate carving and sculpture that made the architecture of this period unique. Thus the finished building was the product of the combined efforts of these three levels, working together. But such unity could come only when a higher official supervised the job. In the Middle Ages this was the office of the "Master Builder".

Our educational system resembles this order, in that each level of instruction completes a part of the total job of educating a community. Education also must have a supervisor to coordinate the talents and efforts of all. Today we call him the superintendent and his name is Mr. Perry Tipler.

Literally, Superintendent Tipler's job resembled that of the master builder. Since his arrival in January of 1946, Mr. Tipler consulted with architects, approved blueprints and balanced the budget for eight new schools, three additions to old schools and three additions to new schools. Assured at the beginning of his administration that a new high school would soon be built, Mr. Tipler worked for thirteen years to make the promise a physical reality. The opening of the new high school in 1961 began a new period, a building era, such as the 110 square mile Oshkosh Area School District had never before seen.

Suddenly area schools seemed either too small, too old or too inadequate. A building program was needed that would eliminate these problems and update the schools as quickly as possible. Because of the extra man-hours Mr. Tipler devoted to building projects, the present program is one of the most advanced in the state. Even so, the superintendent estimated that it is about a year behind the need, and already plans are being made to construct a second high school and another new elementary school.

"I can't imagine not being busy," said Mr. Tipler in regard to his retirement. But what does a "master builder" do after the job is done? He goes on to another job, of course.

After spending some time touring Europe, Mr. Tipler plans to establish an educational consultant service. With 21 years of experience upon which to draw, he expects to aid the superintendents of smaller districts who have neither the time nor the experience to cope with an ever increasing school population and shrinking building facilities.

The "master builder" is leaving; already decorators and carpenters are busy remodeling his office for his successor. But the building program continues. On Witzel Avenue, the framework of yet another educational structure is casting its shadow on the surrounding ranch-house neighborhood. When opened to students in the fall, it will be known as the Perry Tipler Junior High School.

Externally, No Differences; Education Act Worked Inside

Climatically, Oshkosh is influenced by prevailing westerlies and changes result from Canadian low pressure systems. But, the winds of educational change that blew through the school system this year were easterlies born out of a financial high pressure system generated in Washington D. C. As a result, six changes arose from the basic programs, five of which were made possible by the Federal Aid Program.

The Federal Aid Title I program of 1965 appropriated funds to school districts for special programs designed to meet the needs of educationally "deprived" children. Title II provided funds for school libraries which were used to obtain history and social science books and other resource materials. New angular shaped carrels used in the library for study purposes were also furnished under the Title II program.

One provision under Title I, furnished the school with the services of a qualified social worker to do individualized counseling. The new staff member met with students at the high school three times a week.

The Work Experience Program, designed to help students finish high school, provided special educational incentives for two types of students. Phase one students had dropped out of school and now wished to complete diploma requirements. Students were helped to work out a part-time schedule of the courses needed for graduation. Extra subjects were assigned if time was available.

Phase two students were those whose lack of academic success was forcing them to consider quitting school. These students received individual programs tailored for a portion of the day. When their school day was over, students began their work day thus supplementing classroom experience with work experience.

In the conference room of the library, classes for Remedial Reading met. Sophomores in Basic English rotated classroom work with reading improvement every nine weeks. This course was designed to help students develop fundamental reading skills.

Although not covered under the Federal Aid Program, a change was made in the film service system. Educational films and tapes were centralized in the Board of Directors Building so that teachers could have 24 hour film service.

Day-to-Day Efficiency Hid Workers Efforts

If the light of learning ever flickers in this mechanized world, it will be because a man forgot to change the lightbulb. If the heat of classroom controversy ever cools, it will be because a man in the boiler room failed to feed the fire.

Between his sophomore orientation and graduation, the average student dashes through the school's halls for five hundred and forty days, stopping to complain from time to time that he is nothing but a cog in a big teaching machine, never realizing that if the school is such a machine, it is not self-automating. Who winds those clocks he watches? From main offices to laundry room, school personnel operate such an efficient machine that a student rarely even hears the motor hum.

Someone runs off the announcements a student hears daily, handles his tardy slips and absence reports, arranges his transfers and rearranges his program. Those "someones" work in the Main Office.

THREE TIMES A DAY for 176 days of the school year, an endless line of students picked up lunch trays and for the same length of time Mrs. Kemnitz, Mrs. Postl and Mrs. Schuettpeiz stood alongside a conveyor belt in the kitchen parceling out portions of the complete lunch onto passing trays.

SCHOOL'S FOOD PREPARATION STAFF: D. Haupt, J. Parfitt, E. Bathke, V. Scheuermann, E. Felker, G. Postl, E. Koch, M. Schuettpeiz, E. Bahr.

Next to them, in the Guidance Office, another secretary guards his secret folder and arranges for him to see his counselor. Counselors help him cope with his personal and academic problems, plot his career and college plans.

Our student never shakes the hands that peel his potatoes, salt his soup and butter his bread. His lunch tray doesn't really fill up by magic.

Nor does the white knight ride down to the school laundry room and point his lance at the dirty pile of towels and uniforms to make it disappear. The job requires the efforts of a full time and a part time laundress.

At 3:30 the school day ends for most students; it just begins for the night custodians. By the time the student squeaks into his seat to beat the 8:00 bell, the floors are mysteriously cleaned, the boards washed, the chairs in place and the trash burned. The day crew has already switched on the lights to set the big machine in motion for another day. The student rarely even hears the motor hum.

Upperclassmen Bilked Sophomores

Like most of the repainted lockers, the 778 sophomores were also "green". They made their way through the maze of halls in a daze, pausing to glance at the numbers on the doors and letters on the floors to make sure they were still on the right track. Navigation through the countless corridors was no easy matter with the upperclassmen to guide bewildered sophs to the nearest elevator or the second floor.

After learning they shouldn't buy "O" Room passes, wash their trays after lunch, trust upperclassmen or expect the 3:30 bus to wait for them, sophomores' brows became unwrinkled. Not only was the building bigger than any of the junior highs', it was also very different.

In the fall, sophomores joined extracurricular activities, went to the annual "Penny Party", had class pictures taken and elected Student Council homeroom representatives. They built five Homecoming floats and cheered their attendant on the Queen's Court.

By spring the sophomores had, among other things, read SHANE, JULIUS CAESAR and HIROSHIMA in English II, taken the twice-a-week trip to Driver Education in B-22 and dissected frogs in Biology I. Sophomores also elected class officers for the junior year.

Juniors Zeroed In on Year 1968

1966—a door opened and 751 juniors floated down the Mississippi with HUCKLEBERRY FINN. In late fall, juniors bought class rings, discussed Per Hansa's death in GIANTS IN THE EARTH, added outside jobs to their already busy list of activities and read about Emily and George in OUR TOWN. Many juniors learned what a hypotenuse was while others studied lengthy chemical abbreviation tables. Juniors, with late birthdays, took drivers' tests. Some started making plans to attend college. Most felt they were majoring in testing.

1967—Spring found juniors making out senior program schedules and scrawling curious signs which stated their capabilities to hold senior class office. Signs and spirited battle cries proclaimed that juniors were the best at pep rallies. Now the door is closing. Collectively and individually, juniors are taking a deep breath to crash through that thickest of all doors—the one marked seniors.

Security Promises Future Insecurity

Security is . . .

Finally being at the top of the totem pole;
Screaming the loudest at pep rallies;
Running out in rain, sleet and snow to take down the flag;
Finally being able to decipher the codes for time schedules;
The status of sitting on the north side of the gym at pep rallies;
Meeting friends in the "O" Room;
No more Iowa tests;

Taking the last English mastery test;
Attending your final "Penny Party";
Being accepted at that "special" college;
Participating in those "well-planned" Senior class meetings;
Trying to decide the type of print for personal cards;
Giving orders for announcements;
Measuring for cap and gown;
Walking up the aisle to receive that hard-earned award;

Assembling on the gym floor to sing "Thanks for the Memories" at Senior Farewell;
Having a sunny day for graduation;
Being a part of the proud blue mass that filed in for the ceremonies;
Clutching that beautiful blue diploma in your hands;
Holding back the tears as you sing the strains of the "Alma Mater" for the last time as a group.

♦ MIKE WATKINS WAS DETERMINED to get a graduation gown that fit. He stood tall. This forced Margo Wilson to reach up with her yardstick as she placed it alongside Mike's head. Margo also had to look up to read off the height markings on the wall chart.

MYSTERIOUS IN APPEARANCE and awesome in consequence, Mr. Patterson borrowed the electrical gadget from Mr. Hymer. The contraption provided Psychology classes with a loud, vivid demonstration of pain and unpleasantness. Nancy Mueller, who acted as guinea pig for her class, avoided a second association with the machine.

WITH THE HOMEROOM'S folder containing samples of announcements and personal cards before her, Sharon Zelhofer paused to deliberate her choice before placing her order.

BEHIND A BRIGHTLY DECORATED table set with assorted Christmas delicacies, Kathy Dahms and Kathy Zwicky tried to judge teachers' reactions to their culinary efforts. Lynn Penzenstadler was kept too busy serving punch to have any apprehensions.

Since he has worked behind the scenes on 14 consecutive NOTEBOOKS, I thought it was time to bring him out in the open. This is Mr. John Thompson of THOMPSON STUDIO. He is your introduction to a superior world of photography.

For banking service adapted to her individual needs, I took Helen Guenther to the NEW AMERICAN BANK. Here, there is no such thing as a trivial account.

What's happening in fashion right now is happening at CANTERBURY SHOP. The very sight of this smashing print trio gave both Yvonne Retelle and I an elated glow.

OSHKOSH OFFICE SUPPLY does just exactly that—supplies offices with everything from paper clips to fireproof files. Tom Oaks and I were even fascinated by their supplementary catalogues.

Next time those hunger pains cause growling gurgles, don't be embarrassed; just do as Karen Hansen and I did. We stopped at McDONALD'S DRIVE-IN and left smiling.

Ever go shopping and see an ensemble you knew would look neat—on someone else. This sophisticated two-piece suit at JEFFREY'S was right for Debby Studley.

Ever hear of a men's cologne bar? Neither had Mike Hackbarth. The CANTERBURY SHOP is full of pleasant surprises for men. Stop in and see for yourself.

The sign on the building reads JOE'S SPORT SHOP. But, once inside the door both Kathy Rasmussen and I realized that here was a store which provides customers with sporting equipment and advice to meet their year-around recreational needs.

You know, talking with Dawn Strasser convinced me. MARS is an important eating place. For kids who spend long hours at school, dialing the MARS number is automatic at meal time. We're both convinced it's a good habit.

That Rod Brusius. Imagine asking me, "How did the pacesetter in men's sportswear get to Oshkosh"? It was born here as OSHKOSH B'GOSH. I thought everyone knew that!

OSHKOSH NATIONAL BANK is more than a safe place to keep money, Terry Feigel. Its microfilm installation retrieves and displays all your important transactions in just one minute.

With graduation and job interviews pending, it was time to take a practical view of styles and prices. Thanks to the cordial saleslady at JOHNSON HILLS, I was able to help Kathy Kerrigan select a suit appropriate for school or office.

Kathy Pagel flashed a look of delighted surprise when she viewed the results of ONE HOUR MARTINIZING. Drive in service is an added convenience.

Without an inkling as to Warren Jones' tastes for modern or traditional, I decided to acquaint him with GAFNER CUSTOM INTERIORS—where good taste is always in residence.

By the time Jim Beattie and I met Mr. Dewing, SHOREVIEW LANES' plush atmosphere had given us an uncontrollable urge to go bowling.

I hope Jerry Schrock has learned his lesson. You don't need a fashion consultant. Discriminating buyers shop first at the CONTINENTAL.

For that "all-around" look in clothing, Jill Meyer and I shopped in LUCILLES. We soon discovered that we would have to spend a day trying on the clothes we fancied.

Behind the scenes at FIRST NATIONAL BANK, Shirley Jones and I discovered the secret of operating three separate facilities efficiently. Skilled employees and sophisticated equipment provide the answer.

Wouldn't you know! CANTEEN COMPANY provides personal service even when you visit their plant. Mr. Bieselager didn't have to hold that small door open for me. But he did. Next time you're hungry or thirsty ask a silent servant for help. That is why CANTEEN COMPANY maintains them around the clock.

That's right, Tom Hannen. A GOLDEN HANGER jacket always looks trim. From the store's wide selection of wearing apparel you can create an ensemble to fit your personality and purse.

The staff of the 1967 Notebook extends its thanks to the following business and professional people. As contributing subscribers, they are of the conviction that time in their offices will be more pleasurable if spent skimming through the pages of this book.

When the time came for two secretaries-in-training to name the specialist in office furniture, machines and equipment, wouldn't you know Karen Schrauth and I both named SCARPF'S, INC. Embarrassing? You are never embarrassed by the best.

Rene Peerenboom thought all food stores were the same until I took her to the meat counter at STANGEL'S & BURR'S SUPER VALU. If you go shopping with her, this is where she'll take you.

Editor's Accomplishment Finished

When I think of the times I spent in room W-10, the Notebook office, a flood of memories comes to mind. Some are pleasant, others unpleasant but all were in the pursuit of an accomplishment.

As layout editor and now as editor, I had the responsibility to see that 1,340 sophomore pictures were accurately trimmed and coded. For the 1,251 senior portraits, the recollection is both more vivid and more complicated. They had to be alphabetized, stamped, allowed to dry and then coded according to page number and position.

I was advised not to rush the process, so I had my patience tested. I rushed and then had to go back and carefully remove from seniors' faces traces of partially dried stamp pad ink. I had assembled and stacked some of the portraits before the ink on the back had completely dried.

One picture memory which will always be exclusively mine is this year's first venture into color photography. The entire process from selection through final coding demanded special techniques.

I'll remember the two December days in which I picked out the covers to the two books. The first wasn't as memorable since two people picked that one. After selecting this year's cover, the hardest part was ahead of me; to keep the design and color a secret for six months.

I'll remember the days when proofs arrived. In the next 72 hours, I had to correct each page after placing it on the light table, score all the errors and type correction sheets.

Notebook '67 represents an accomplishment. A job that I first started training for in my sophomore year and actually planning for as a junior is ended. This is the end to three adventure filled years in room W-10.

♦ RESPONSIBLE FOR NOTEBOOK'S 171 candid and advertising pictures were Mr. "M", Mike, Donald, Bruce and John.

♦ A PAGE PROOF error prompted Chris to peer over the top of her glasses to confirm visually what she had heard Karen LeBelle read aloud.

♦ MOMENTARILY STUNNED by an off-hand comment pertaining to copy changes, Sandy would shortly release her favorite expletive, "You've got to be kidding".

♦ SENIOR PICTURES INADVERTENTLY loaded into the wrong envelopes sent Nancy, Debbie and Pat to the only reliable confirmation source available, the Junior section of last year's annual.

♦ SINCE THE ANALOGY between the chef and editor is frequently made, it's appropriate to show Elaine when she was a chef—grilling hot dogs for the rest of the staff.

Dear Kris:

It's been a pleasure knowing you this year, you're real sweet, nice, kind, etc. I sincerely wish you the best of luck with your 30 gr. old ^{and out of} study hall. We certainly had our laughs in the night you were stoned? I know you helped you home this summer. Just remember those famous words of Chilton Vardugle, "The opposite of up is down" and all you want in life will fade away. Your right hand

Dear Kris, there can be that queer up then I can take up the other half. Boy - we've been through a lot together - MILWAUKEE - mock! Well - there's not much left to say except, it's been fun! I hope next year you'll let me come up to the apartment and see you. Take it easy out at the airport with all the guys. Love - Bunny hugs, Vicki Kahler
